

GOTHAM

March 24, 2016

Upscale Restaurants That Prove Good Indian Food in NYC Isn't Just Limited to Takeout

When your next wave of Indian food cravings hit, resist the urge to order from your nearby takeout joint. Instead, make an evening out of it with an unforgettable experience at one of these upscale Indian restaurants all around the city.

Indian Accent

This newcomer located inside Midtown's Le Parker Méridien offers traditional Indian food with modern tweaks and artful plating. With options ranging from two to four courses, and a chefs tasting menu, diners can explore a range of the cuisine in just one sitting. Menu highlights include kashmiri morel, which showcases a whole roasted walnut topped with parmesan papad, kolhapuri chicken, composed of peanuts, cucumbers, tomatoes, and avocados, and a savory pork belly vindaloo served with goad red rice. Be sure to leave room for the creamy makhan malai for dessert made with saffron milk, rose petal brittles, and almonds. 123 W. 56th St., 212-842-8070