8 Restaurants to Add to Your 2016 Foodie Bucket List

Make it a resolution: eight great new restaurants to check out in 2016.

New York is a foodie's paradise—dozens of restaurants open each season with star chefs and innovative restaurateurs making sure the city remains one of the world's leading culinary capitals. Here are eight new restaurants worth a resolution to sample in the New Year.

Indian Accent

Why the buzz: Indian Accent is restaurateur Rohit Khattar's first foray into New York; he's setting up at Le Parker Meridien hotel. His original location, in New Delhi, was hailed as the best restaurant in India by the famed San Pellegrino list, which ranks the world's finest tables.

What to order: Butter-poached lobster with Kashmiri spinach and chili broth. Leave room for dessert—the Bengal rice pudding with candied fox nuts, air-dried fruits, and white chocolate is not to be missed.

The crowd: Because the restaurant is on billionaire's row, expect a lot of chichi internationals.

When to go: The restaurant is launching with dinner, and will add lunch soon after. 123 W. 56th St.
