Ultimate Spring Guide: Enjoy eating outdoors as NYC offers plenty of places to dine al fresco

This spring, there will be plenty of new outdoor spaces to dine al fresco, from floating seafood restaurants to rooftop pool seating with sweeping views of the city.

They're not all open yet, but check in with these spots in a few weeks.

Indian Accent

(123 W. 56th St. in the Le Parker Meridian Hotel, Manhattan indianaccent.com/nyc)

The first location of this hit New Delhi restaurant recently opened in the Le Parker Meridian hotel, serving inventive Indian cuisine that melds global influences. As soon as the weather gets warmer, it'll offer 20 outdoor seats, where guests can enjoy menus of two- ($55), three- ($75) or four courses ($95), or a set chef's tasting menu of seven courses ($100).

A variety of papads from Indian Accent, a new restaurant at Le Parker Meridian, which will soon have outdoor seating.
