

EATER

Asia's Best Indian Restaurant Is Coming to Palm Springs Next Month

Indian Accent arrives in the desert for a limited run

A dish from Indian Accent Indian Accent

Beginning Friday April 7 and running for one weekend only, award-winning Indian restaurant Indian Accent is coming to The Parker Palm Springs. With locations in New York City and New Delhi proper, the place is sure to draw big crowds out to the Coachella Valley early next month.

Indian Accent is a routine addition to any conversation about global Indian food, landing a coveted spot on the Asia's 50 Best Restaurants list last year (including the subtitle of best overall restaurant in India). Their New York City location landed in Midtown Manhattan last summer as well, with Eater NY critic Ryan Sutton giving it an enthusiastic 2 stars.

Beginning that Friday, April 7, Indian Accent will roll into the hotel's on-site restaurant, mister parker's, for a set 10-course menu from corporate chef Manish Mehrotra. There will be both dinner timings available (6:30 p.m. and 8:30 p.m. for $120 a pop), and a single Sunday lunch seating at 12:30 p.m. on offer for $75. If you want to scope the full menu and get a reservation for yourself, head right this way.